

Any delay to the publishing of the report has 2 effects - political momentum to oust Johnson lessens, and a leadership contest overshadows the local and NI elections. So delay helps Johnson, at least until the Met conclude.

Chances 54 letters reached early February*
54%

Johnson gone in early February, leadership election starts 40%

Johnson survives at least until the Met Police concludes its investigation 60%

Theoretically Labour could initiate No Confidence proceedings against the Government, but might instead choose to wait - cannot work this out yet

Opportunity here for chaos - were Met to finish in March, and conclude breaches were serious, Johnson could have to go then - messes with timetable for local and NI elections, leadership overshadows those

Does Johnson survive?

Diagram by Jon Worth | jon@jonworth.eu
jonworth.eu | Twitter @jonworth
Diagram version 2.0.0, 27.1.2022, 15:20

High res PDF, PNGs, & XML, ODS calc
jonworth.eu/downloads/doesjohnsonsurvive

Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-4.0
Generic (CC BY-NC 4.0) License

* - this is the overall chance of 54 being reached early February. If we assume Sue Gray Report published early February is 100%, then chances 54 is reached is 67%